The cuttings of the speeches are put up.

It is believed that the final report of the Committee appointed to consider the schemes submitted by Diwan Bahadur Mr. J. S. Chakravarti and myself for the extension of medical relief in rural parts, has been submitted to Government by the Senior Surgeon and President of the Committee. The Committee propose that a Training institution should be started at Bangalore and that the Ayurvedic College suitably reorganized, should be transferred to Bangalore to work in ^{order} consideration with the institution. A copy of Appendix C to the report of the Committee which relates to this part of the subject is put up for ready reference.

The two systems, viz. - Allopathy and Ayurvedic - are radically different in their methods and equipment and it will be altogether misleading to institute any comparison. One at least of the men referred to will be provide for in the Ayurvedic College and the claims of the remaining two will be given preferential consideration when vacancies among the Vidyasalas occur. Considering the acquirements of these young men, it will not be too much to give them the pay and position of Sub Assistant Surgeons but all the Vidyasalas are now maintained wholly from the District and Municipal Funds and it is a matter for the local bodies who employ them to decide whether they can bear the increased cost.

In the proposed training institution, some stipends are to be reserved for female students who will attend the local maternity and if any of these should be found competent to prosecute their further studies in Ayurveda they will be quite welcome.

Draft reply.

(a) The observations have been perused by Government.

(b) The question has been recently considered by a Committee in connection with a scheme for the training of rural medical practitioners and their recommendations are now before Government.

(c) The standards and curricula are different and do not lend themselves to comparison. Useful openings will be found for the men but no guarantee can be given.

(d) It is doubtful if suitable female students with sufficient knowledge of Sanskrit will be forthcoming. Facilities for the training of such students are provided in the proposed training institution.

(e) The Government have not sufficient data to express a definite opinion names of the persons who
